Biography

Derek Scissors is a Research Fellow for Asia Economic Policy at The Heritage Foundation.

At Heritage, Scissors focuses on the Chinese economy and broad Asian economic trends and challenges facing the United States. In addition to his duties with the think tank, Scissors is Adjunct Professor at George Washington University, where he teaches on the Chinese economy.

Before joining Heritage in August 2008, Scissors was China economist at Intelligence Research, a global political risk assessment firm. In that role, he counseled clients - primarily Fortune 500 executives - concerning their China operations. Scissors also wrote or edited the firm's various publications. In the mid-1990s, he taught at the Department of Social Science, Lingnan College.
